This system is being piloted for those travelling from London to Reading and London to Redhill. You can find out whether you are already booked on a train by logging on to the National Rail website. The website does not show waiting lists at this stage, but they are working on this. The new system allows passengers to select their preferred date for a train, and also allows them to check waiting lists. The service has been rolled out to allow people to plan their travel in advance. Some passengers may be able to see how many seats are available for that train on their preferred date. For those who wish to book through a travel agent, travel agents will be able to tell whether they have a waiting list on a particular train. The travel agent will then confirm whether they can sell a ticket. Other services have been put into place to make journeys more efficient. Extra carriages can be used on certain trains, or delays to trains can be predicted for the coming hour. Patricia Murphy, of the Rail Delivery Group which includes the Network Rail, said: "One of the things we really want to do is to have a better way of knowing if you are waiting for a train."[A randomized controlled study of combined treatment of two contrast agents with phenobarbital against peripheral spasm of the inferior vena cava]. To investigate the effect of a combination of two contrast agents with phenobarbital against peripheral spasm of the inferior vena cava (PIVC). A randomized controlled trial was performed. Eighty-eight patients undergoing cesarean section were divided into four groups. The patients in the control group underwent regional anesthesia with intrathecal injection of bupivacaine. The patients in the other three groups received phenobarbital intraperitoneally after the cesarean section. The patients in Group I (20 cases) received a 82157476af
